

A new Alopecosa-species found in Greece

DETLEV CORDES

Institut für Zoologie II, Universität Erlangen,
Staudstraße 5, 91058 Erlangen, Germany

A new species of the genus Alopecosa (Lycosidae) was found during a voyage in Greece in 1992. The poster gives first a descriptions of male and female. Habitus and genitalia are illustrated. Additionally the courtship display of the male is described. This discovery is a further example for: Not all spiders, looking like the wolf spider Alopecosa pulverulenta, in fact belong to this species.